Harmony in Virginia, at Staunton, July 26. DEMOCRATIC MISMANAGEMENT.

The Last Administration of Government

The revolution in trade and commerce which occurred in the year 1857 disastrous ly affected the revenues of the Governent, as it did the revenues of the people and the Democratic Administration which had just declared that amid such wide spread financial wreck and ruin the Treasury would continue to pay gold and silver only, was forced really to the humiliating necessity of asking authority to issue paper money.

The Secretary of the Treasury informed Congress in his report of Dec. 8, 1857, that, although there was a balance on hand at the close of the fiscal year of $17,710, 114.27, yet such was the falling-off in the revenues from customs that it was necessary to provide the Treasury with some additional means of meeting the demands upon it, and that unless relief was speedily afforded there was great danger that the available funds might be exhausted. He therefore asked authority to issue $20, 000,000 in Treasury notes. A bill for this purpose was introduced, and in the debates which followed it was truly said that the closing hours of the Thirty-fourth Congress had been consumed in efforts to deplete an overflowing Treasury, while the early days of the Thirty-fifth Congress not increasing the public debt to meet the were devoted to efforts to fill an empty current expenses was a very patriotic one one. Only a short time before the Secretary had asked Congress to reduce the accumulated coin on hand by a revision of the Revenue laws, and now he was asking permission to fill its empty confers by the secretary of the secreta the issue of paper money. Instead of proposing a reduction of expenditures an in-rease was recommended.

The Secretary of the Treasury saked in creased expenditures to collect the diminished revenue, while the Secretary of War wanted permission to raise four or five additional regiments at an additional expense of four or five millions of dollars, though the whole business of the country was paralyzed, its commerce almost destroyed, its industrial classes living in enforced idleness, with willing hands imploring in vain the privilege of labor, and the Government bankrupt, asking anthority to fill its coffers by the issue of paper money. A bill authorising the issue of $20,000,000 Treasury notes was consequently passed, but a prediction was made that this amount would be largely insufficient, and that by the end of the year the Treasury would be many millions in debt, and that prediction was soon verified.

ARKING A LOAN TO MERT EXPENSES.

In May, 1858, the Secretary of the Treasury was compelled to inform Congress of his difficulties, that owing to the appropriate the country daring the later years of his difficulties, that owing to the appropriate to submit to the control of the majority, plunged the country into war. crease was recommended.

priations having been increased by legislation nearly $10,000,000 over the estimates, and the revenue from customs having fallen below the estimate about an equal amount, means to meet the deficit should be provided. A bill to authorize a loan not exceeding $15,000,000 was reported to the House May 20, 1858. This bill was subsequently amended, the amount belong increased by the Sanata to $20,000. was subsequently amended, the amount being increased by the Senate to $20,000, 000, and became a law June 14, 1858. The interest was not to exceed five per cent, and the loan was made redeemable at any time after fifteen years. Secretary Cebb, in his annual report to Congress, dated December 22, 1859, uses the following lan-

December 22, 1809, uses the following har-guage:
"In the estimated means of the Treas-ury for the present and fiscal years it will be seen that no provision is made for the permanent redemption of any portion of the $20,000,000 of Treasury notes. The authority for reissuing these notes will ex-pire on the 20th of June next, and it will, therefore, be necessary for Congress to ex-tend the law for that purpose another period."

tend the law for that purpose another period."

Congress appears to have differed with the Secretary as to the propriety of reissuing the notes; for, instead of giving authority to do so, a hill providing for their redemption by means of a loan was introduced, and, passing both Houses almost without debate, was approved June 22, 1860. It authorized a loan of $21,000,000 with interest at not exceeding 6 per cent, redeemable in not less than ten or more than twenty years.

The failure to realize the whole amount authorized was caused by the political troubles that culminated in the war of the rebellion. Bids were invited for $40,000,000 on September 8, 1860, and the whole amount offered was speedily taken. A commercial crisis ensued, during which a portion of the bidders forfeited their deposits, and the loan was withdrawn from the market. The smount finally secured was only $7,022,000. As a result of this failure authority for a further issue of Treasury notes was saked for by Secretary Cobb. In his report of December 4, 1860, he says:

"To meet the remaining outstanding Treasury notes was asact on by Gereal (Cobb. In his report of December 4, 1800, he says:

"To meet the remaining outstanding Treasury notes and interest thereon there is yet to be negotiated $11,000,000 of the loan authorized by the act of June 22, 1860. The statement just made of the difficulties attending the payment for the stock already sold, in connection with the fact that capitalists in the present condition of the country seem unwilling to invest in United States stock at par, renders it almost certain that this remaining $11,000,000 cannot now be negotiated upon terms acceptable to the Government. The condition of the Treasury is such that no serious delay can be indulged. Authority should be given for the issue of Treasury notes to an equal amount, to be negotiated at such rates as would command the confidence of the country, and to great that confidence the public lands should be unconditionally pledged for the ultimate redemption of the Treasury notes which it might become necessary to issue."

USURIOUS RATES OF INTEREST. The rate of interest actually paid on the notes issued under this act has been the ubject of frequent dispute, and the facts, as given in an official form, are as follows as given in an official form, are as Iollows:

"Under the act of Dec. 17, 1860 (12 Statutes, 121), Treasury notes were issued, redeemable at the expiration of one year from date, bearing interest as follows: $70,200 at 6 per cent, $5,000 at 7 per cent, $24,500 at 8 per cent, $33,000 at 8 per cent, $10,000 at 8 per cent, $35,000 at 9 per cent, $10,000 at 9 per cent, $10,000 at 9 per cent, $10,000 at 9 per cent, $266,000 at 10 per cent, $266,000 at 10 per cent, $24,337,000 at 10 per cent, $1,337,000 at 1

In January, 1861, the Secretary, in or-der to relieve the Treasury from its em-barrassment, was forced to ask Congress for authority to obtain a loan without restriction as to the price of the bonds. This money was needed, not to meet loans falling due, or to pay the expenses of war, but was asked for in times of profound striction as to the piece of the consistant of the current expenses of war, but was asked for in times of profound peace, to meet the current expenses of the Government. Never before, since the year 1789, when a small sum was borrowed to pay salaries, etc., under the new Government, had a loan been asked to meet ordinary expenditures. So low had the credit of the Government fallen at that time that Secretary Dix suggested to Congress, as a financial resource, that the several States be asked, as security for the payment of any money the Government might find it necessary to borrow, to pledge the deposits received by them from the Government under the act for the distribution of the surplus revenues in 1838, the Secretary believing that a loan contracted on such a basis of security, superadding to the plighted faith of the United States that of the individual States, could hardly fail to be acceptable to capitalists.

A bill was introduced February 2, 1861, authorizing a loan of $25,000,000, to bear interest not less than ten or more than twenty years. The bill became a law February 8. 1861, after earnest debates, in which, however, no opposition was manifested to the bill as a whole, but simply to details, both parties agreeing that a loan was absolutely necessary. Bonds to the amount of $18,415,000 were sold under the authority of this act at an aggregate discount of $20,90,776.10, or an average rate of $89 03 per $100. Secretary Cobb, in his report above referred to, says:

"The estimated balance that will be in the Treasury on June 30, 1861, is only $3, 530,196 61, and leaves no margin for additional appropriations. If, therefore, the appropriations should exceed the estimates, or Congress ahould determine to provide within this period for the payment of any portion of the public debt, it will become necessary to make provision for such contingancies. The idea of increasing the public debt to meet the ordinary expense of the Government should not be entertained for a moment. If additional demands are created

Democratic Economy Illustrated. A Treasury Department circular just i sued utterly ruins the Democratic claim that that party has brought economy into the public service. This circular embraces the appropriations for each fiscal year from 1878 to 1881 inclusive, which are given in currency and in coin, as follows:

There was no appropriation for the army in 1878, and a double one in 1879. Deducting half the army appropropriation for 1878, it appears that the aggregate appropriations made by the Democrats for the fiscal years 1879, 1880 and 1881 were in round numbers $461,000,000, or an aver age annual appropriation of $153,000,000 The aggregate appropriations made by the Republican party for the last three years of its power were $424,000,000, or at the rate of $141,000,000 a year.
